THE TWO PENNANTS.

" The League Pennant is ours and fairly won," might have been the exclamation of the Giants after yesterday's game.

It has been a long and a hard fight, bu Manager MUTRIE's men were organized for victory and they have " got there."

SUNDAY BEER

Rev. Dr. CROSBY will probably shock the fenatical temperance people with his suggestion that the saloons be permitted to keep open for an hour on Sunday at noon to sell beer to be taken home to drink.

But Dr. Choshy recognizes, as many people of less understanding do not, that beer is just as necessary to the meals of thousands of families in this city as water, wine or coffee are to others. They have been brought up on it, and think it a less harmful and more grateful beverage than ice water.

As a practical man, Dr. CROSBY likewise knows that beer is sold, and will continue to be sold, on Sunday in spite of the law forbidding it. And he thinks it better to stop law_breaking, sneaking, lying and secret drinking by providing one hour in which beer can be bought for home consumption; Dr. CROSBY is right.

A CRADLE - COFFIN.

"From the cradle to the grave "describes life's journey, be it long or short. But it is a rare thing that the cradle goes to the grave. This singular fancy has just been realized, however, in the burial of Mrs. RUTH HALL, of Wallingford, Conn., aged seventy-four years, in a coffin made from the cradle in which she was rocked nearly three-quarters of a century ago. Here is a theme for the poets and moralizers. The first sleep and the last long sleep in the same receptacle! What songs have been sung over it! What hopes and fears must have centred in the cradle that rocked three generations of the same family! And to go to the earth at last!

Surely, the practical "Yankees" are not all lacking in sentiment.

A big solid and lofty platform was erected at Gold and Spruce streets and was covered with American flags and bandannas. A gorgeous silken banner 20 feet by 30, bearing portraits of the Democratic candidates, hung across the thoroughfare near by, and a brass band played popular airs from 11.30 till shortly after noon.

By that time there were over three thousand people assembled and the platform was crowded with distinguished Democrats. Great enthusiasm was displayed.

Congressman W. C. P. Breckenridge, of Kentucky, made an eloquent address and the banner was unfurled amid tumultuous cheering. Afterwards Jackson S. Schultz and James Frazer spoke.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Swamp Democratic Club, whose officers are A. A. Healy, President; M. E. Clarendon, Treasurer, and W. B. Hazeltine, Grand Marshal.

Wheat Cornering May Be Safe

But Other Laws of God and Man Condemn It.

Under the Illinois Code.

It Should Be Punished to the Fullest Possible Extent.

Is the action of Mr. Hutchinson in cornering the wheat market of Chicago, and sa a result raising the price of floor $1.75 per barrel and raising the price of bread for rich and poor, a criminal act?

If so, how should the cornerer or any other gambler in the necessaries of life be punished?

Judge Van Brunt, of the Supreme Court looked thoughtful when an Evening World reporter put the questions before him. Several minutes elapsed before, in his cold, even voice, he said : "I am not prepared to answer those ques tions now. They are momentous ones. From the aspect of affairs at the present date I think they are questions that I may be called upon any day to answer with an official opinion. Therefore I do not teel at liberty to answer them now."

Judge Martine was sitting in Part II. of General Sessions when the reporter asked him to answer the same important questions. He asked time to consider them. At noon he received the reporter in his private chambers

"I have considered the questions very seriously and would like to answer them, but I cannot do so. In the first place I have not read enough of Hutchinson's transaction, and from a legal standpoint I do not know whether he is amenable or not. I think he is. Anyhow, I hope so. "It is men like him who are instrumental in keeping our poorhouses crowded. From one end of this land to the other there comes a cry from the poor people that should make him tremble. There can be no question but that, morally, he has committed a grievous wrong."

Could he not be arrested upon a charge of conspiracy?"

'He seems to have acted alone in this matter, although how he could engineer such a gigantic scheme unaided I am at a loss to inderstand 'If it could be proved that he had deliber-

"If it could be proved that he had deliberately planned with others to raise the price of wheat, what then?"

"I think he has violated the laws of his native State, and that he can be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both."

Bright and chipper as ever, De Lancey Nicoll was encountered in a hallway of the Court-House. He answered the questions promptly.

"I am sure that Hutchinson has violated the law, if it is the same in Illinon as in this State. Here he could be arrested, and accused of conspiracy. If convicted, he would be liable to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $500.

I think THE EVENING WORLD is right in "I think The Evening World is right in agitating the matter. I wonder if Mr. Blaine still thinks that Trusts are private enterprises with which the common people have nothing to do. I think they have the hardest part of Hutch's corner to deal with. It is they who must do without bread or else pay an exorbitant price for it this winter. They will remember Hutchinson long after he has ceased to think of the barrels of money he made by the transaction." ceased to think of the made by the transaction.'

Beveral other prominent members of the Bar were interviewed upon the subject and answered very much in the same way with Col. Fellows could not be found at the Dis-trict-Attorney's office, but Assistant District-Attorney Jerome undertook to answer the questions.

He said: "It was, at common law in olden times, a crime punishable by fines, imprisonment, or both, to conspire to raise the price of any of the necessary articles of life, I am not prepared to say if Hutchinson has violated any law or laws of the present day. It may be, and I think it is still, a crime to conspire for such a purpose in this State. That or such a purpose in this spire for such a purpose in this State. That would not have any particular bearing on this present case, however, unless he has violated some law of the State of Illinois. The laws of that State are widely different from ours. I am not well enough versed in them to say, now, whether the big wheat man has violated any of the laws there or not."

Lawyer and ex-Assemblyman James D. Mc-Clelland deciared that the old common law of the English courts, making it a criminal offense, had been transmitted to our statutes and could still be enforced in this and many others of the United States.

"Illinois among them?" asked the reporter.

"I am not sure about that State. Still, I believe that by acting as he has done in cornering the wheat market, Hutchinson has violated not only a State law, but a law of the United States."

Assistant District-Attorney Dos Passos said:
"The offense of cornering the market on breadstuffs or other commodities necessary to the nourishment of life has been committed and punished criminally from time immemorial. The offense at common law in olden days was called 'forestalling the market.' It is still recognized and embodied in the statutes of this State. Under the more genteel names of corners, combinations or Trusts, it has been condemned by nearly all the courts in our country, including the United States Supreme Court. In many of United States Supreme Court. In many of the States persons who unlawfully enter into combinations to control the necessary com-modities of life can be punished by fine and imprisonment.

"How would you go about punishing Hutchinson?" was asked. "Well, if I suffered by him in this State, I would go to a police magistrate and swear out a warrant for arrest on a charge of conspir-acy. He would come to trial in due time and a jury of the people would try him."

ENSHRINED IN TOPICAL SONG.

The Famous Question "Is Marriage a Failure ?" as Treated by Comedian Drew. Realizing the intense interest taken by the public in the far-famed topic of discussion in THE EVENING WORLD, "Is Marriage a Failure?" Comedian C. H. Drew, of the Carleton Opera Company, now at Col. Sinn's Park Theatre, Brooklyn, has introduced in his topical song in "Mynheer Jan," entitled 'Few and Far Between," a verse on the subject which brings forth much applause. It is The failures of marriage,

The failures of marriage, which all will disparage, Are few and far between.

THE EVENING WORLD'S Hying With efforts undying. To solve this great riddle, t'would seem, the cool wives there are plenty, with never a flaw;

Old rags, wire, iron and junk of every description were scattered on the street, and about the doorway through which the reporter entered. The dingy little office was crowded with men. Beside the railing the famous McQuade stood and conversed with them. He did not look them in the face, but kept his eyes fastened on a newspaper which he held in his hand.

Rumor of More Closing-Up Orders from the Sogar Trust.

The hundreds of men employed in the sugar refineries in Williamsburg are very much disturbed by the rumor that the Sugar Trust, of which Theodore A. Havemeyer is President, is about to issue another order to close down.

The first thunderbolt was cast among them on Tuesday, when, without a word of warning, 300 men were discharged from De Castro & Donner's refinery at the corner of Kent avenue and South Ninth street. It was thought then that the disaster would spread no further, but the next evening the ears of the workingmen were augmented by the closing of the firm's other refineries on North Third street, between 600 and 700 more men losing their situations as a consequence. The rumor that Dick & Meyer's refinery, on he corner of North Seventh street and Kent avenue, is to close in two weeks has gained a strong hold in the men's minds, and it is said that some of the men have already secured situations elsewhere to guard against a sud-den surprise. Dick & Meyer formerly em-ployed about five hundred men, but at the present time 300 hands represent their entire present time 300 hands represent their entire working force.

If the Trust pursues the plan it has commenced to work on either Doescher's refinery, which adjoins and is connected with Havemeyer & Elder's, or the Brooklyn Refining Company's works will be the next odeclare a lock-out. Doescher now employs about 250 men, against 500, the number they had when they opened in May.

about 250 men, against 500, the number they had when they opened in May.

The Brooklyn Sugar Refining Company has 300 hands in its employ, and is credited with paying the highest wages. Nevertheless, the company is connected with the monopolistic Trust, and will obey that organization's order without regard to the condition into which their workmen will be thrown through losing their situations.

In the mean time Havemeyer & Elder's seven big buildings are being worked to their fullest extent, and now that their own store-houses are filled the refineries of De Castro & Donner are being utilized as receptacles for the overproduction.

The managers of the Trust say that the Bay State Sugar Refinery in Boston, which was shut down recently, is not connected with their organization. If that is so, why is the machinery being removed from that refinery and being placed in the new refinery in Greenpoint? Their statements do not coincide with known facts.
